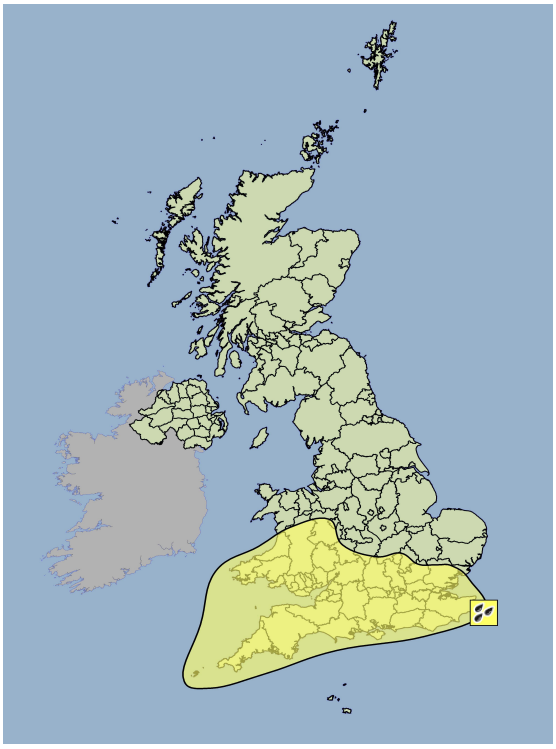
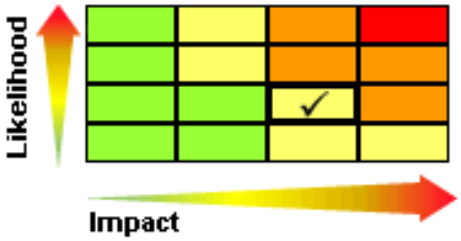
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another Atlantic depression is expected to bring a spell of heavy rainfall and very strong winds to parts of the UK on Wednesday. Southern and western parts of England and Wales look most likely to see further heavy rainfall. Some 15-25 mm of rain are likely within the warning area with a risk of 40 mm on high ground of south Wales and southwest England - much of this within a 12 hour period. Falling soon after earlier widespread rainfall, the cumulative effects of these weather systems are likely to exacerbate the current flooding situation.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 09:00 on Wed, 12th Feb 2014 until 21:00 on Wed, 12th Feb 2014

A further spell of widespread rain, heavy in places, is likely to spread northeastwards across much of the UK on Wednesday clearing eastwards from southern areas on Wednesday evening. Following earlier heavy rainfall, the public should be aware of the potential for further flooding in places.

Gale or severe gale force winds are likely to be an added hazard in places (see separate warnings).

This is an update to the Alert first issued on Sunday.
